GENERAL GRANT.

His Condition not so Good last night, but more Favorable this morning.

New York, May 22, 12 m. There was some undue irritation in General Grant's throat last night, attended by frequent attempts to clear the surfaces of mucus. - These efforts further irritated the parts, and the General being apprehensive of a wakeful night, suggested that Dr. Douglas remain through the night, which he did. When the doctor MolOUD & MOORE, left this morning he said the General's apprehensions proved groundless, for he after which he slept at intervals until perative. The maddened brothers fired 8:30 this forenoon; at that time he awoke with little if any pain. The doctor thought the east wind and the raw chilly

Correspondence Relating to the Transactions at Penjdeh.

The Emphatic Ultimatum of Genera

LONDON, May 22, noon. The correspondence which took place between Col. Zakojewski of Gen. Koma:off's staff and Capt. Yates, of General Sir Peter Lumden's staff respecting the Afghan situation at the time of Penjdeh incident, is now made public. It shows among other things that on the same day that Col. Zakojewski accepted Capt.
Yates' invitation to a collation at which the situation of the opposing outposts was to be discussed, Gen. Komaroff sent an ultimatum to Naib Solar, com dered Naib Solar to withdraw all his troops to the right bank of Kushk river. The ultimatum concluded in these words: "There will be neither negotations nor explanations on the subject-you are too intelligent and short sighted to compel me to see to the fulfilment of this demand." Naib Solar replied that he had consulted with Capt. Yates and was bound to obey the Ameer. Gen. Komaroff rejoined insisting that compliance with the terms of his ultimatum was necessary to preserve peace. He warned Naib Solar against heeding the empty counsels of others and concluded thus; "Choice between friendship and enmity, rests with you." After the battle of Penideh which followed, this intercourse be tween Gen. Komoroff and Naib Solar, Capt. Yates wrote to Col. Zakojewski soliciting protection and offering service of English doctors.

Our readers will doubtless be glad to hear of the following: Dr. D. E. Sal-mon says positively that a mixture of two ounces of sulphuric acid in two gallons of water, will make a disinfectant use. Handle with care.

"Oh, doctor, what shall I do? No relief yet from my fearful cough." "Use Symphyx, of course, madam. No other remedy can possibly cure your cough as quickly. For the pain in your breast, use some of Dr. Hart's Great Relief. A dose of Dr. Hart's Blood and Liver Pills will cure your liver trouble. But, first of all, don't neglect your cough, but use Symphyx, the Great Cough Cure, at one. One dose will relieve you."
